The Sentiment King
100 Stock Report

October 24, 2025

This report is intended to help analysts and investors, who have already decided what stock to buy or sell, determine the best time to buy or sell it. It's also the first serious effort to include investor sentiment into the decision. The 100 stocks were chosen, in part, by high dollar activity in the option market. This requirement was needed to obtain reliable sentiment estimates.

The report is based on these three metrics.

The Individual Stock “Puts vs Calls” Ranking System

Every day the CBOE publishes the amount of money (premium) going into directional puts and calls on individual stocks. The Sentiment King adds the money going into each over 20 days and compares them. We chart the results on our Red Zone - Green Zone graphing system, which ranks the current ratio against historic norms. This indicates how bullish or bearish investors are on the stock. Using twenty days gives the results longer term meaning.

For the general market, Red Zone or Green Zone action signals occur at +9.0 and higher, or minus 9.0 and lower. These levels represent excessive bullish or bearish sentiment. With individual stocks an action signal is +9.5 or higher, or minus 9.5 or lower.

If an investor decides to buy a stock, and it’s in the Red Zone, they’ll probably get a better price if they wait. If they decide to sell a stock and it’s in the Green Zone, they can probably sell at a better price if they wait.

The 100 Day RSI

While most use Wilder’s relative strength (RSI) for the short term, we adjust the RSI parameters for measuring trends of from three to six months. We indicate a stock with an RSI over 57.5 at an extreme high, and an RSI below 42.5 as at an extreme low. This intermediate-term RSI also helps an analyst decide on the whether it’s the right time to buy or sell their chosen stock.

Modified Bollinger Bands

Our modified Bollinger bands are based on a 100-day moving average and lines that represent 2.25 standard deviations above and below the average. We found that these lines often act as support and resistance and indicate when the price has become or overbought or oversold for the intermediate-term,. It is often significant when the price breaks above or below a line temporarily.

The 100 Stock PUTS vs CALLS Ranking

This table, which compares directional money going into puts versus calls over 20 days, ranks stocks by how bearish or bullish the ratio is against historic norms. The ranking is done using the Red Zone - Green Zone ranking system. Actionable signals in the table are shown by red or green colors. The number to the left of the ticker symbol indicates the page in the report. This information is intended to help analysts and investors who have already determined to buy or sell a stock, decide on when to buy or sell it.

The 100 Day RSI

While most use Wilder's relative strength for the short term, we adjust the RSI parameters to indicate intermediate-term trends of from three to six months. This table ranks each stock by its 100 Day RSI. We've indicated with red and green, stocks with high and low RSI readings. The number to the left of the ticker symbol indicates the page in the report.
